Sehr bewegend Brad Hoffman nimmt einen mit durch all seine Hochs Tiefs auf eine so fesselnde Art Weise, dass man das Buch nicht mal fr eine Sekunde weglegen mchte. ;)Ich liebe es seine ehrlichen bodenständigen und gleichzeitig tief philosophischen Gedanken zum Leben und den Leuten um uns herum zu lesen. Er hat wirklich Talent ich freu mich schon drauf, mehr von ihm zu lesen.

Kurzbeschreibung "During a Balkan winter, two strangers briefly met in a caf and decided to keep in touch. With numb hands and spent liquor bottles, aspiring artist Brad Hoffmann sends still frames and warm thoughts to Nadya, the stranger from the caf. Their raw correspondence takes them on a wild and provocative journey that explores life from unique angles: An American expat trying to be a Rock Star, and an attractive Bulgarian business owner trying to find her savior and harmony. Together they dig into each others lives, face their fears, and come to an unexpected discovery: A passion concealing painful truth, becoming a hard lesson about life and love. The wine spills and freezes becoming a slick patch of icy blood on stone. There a broken heart falls and shatters, the dying words will never be known." He spent his youth in Garden Grove, California, getting in and out of trouble. At the age of 17, he dropped out of high school and joined the Army National Guard as an infantryman. Shortly thereafter, Brad Hoffmann was deployed to Iraq where he discovered his love for writing. He especially lived for the letters he wrote, treating them all as if they would be his last words on his dying breath. Upon his return from Iraq, he felt lost and longed for the intensity he had felt while writing overseas. So with hopes to rekindle that passion, Brad set out on a unique journey, living in a multitude of places around the world, immersing himself in everything life had to offer, and writing about the hard lessons he learned along the way. His honesty gives a raw view into the life of a stranger and opens up this strange world for readers to devour. Brad Hoffmann now lives in Stanton, California where he is compiling his second book.
