American meets English VampireVon Helen Hancox'Kiss Me Forever' is an enjoyable tale set in an English village.

The heroine, Dixie LePage, is an American who inherits a house and some money from some English aunts and goes to see about her property. Her initial plan is to just sell up and leave but she finds herself dragged into some strange goings-on in the village of Bringham and is particularly struck by the handsome Christopher Marlowe who seems to know a fair bit about his namesake from Shakespeare's time. But as darker events are unfurled, Dixie has to fight against threats to herself and those she has come to love. The meat of this book seems to be in its setting - the quaint English village of Bringham. I understand that the author originally came from England and this comes across in her writing which is mostly accurate (apart from a few howlers such as describing a meal as 'jacket potato and shrimps' when we would say 'jacket potato and prawns'). As an Englishwoman, I also found some of the behaviour of random people in the story inauthentic; Dixie seemed to be surrounded by people exclaiming about her being American and asking her about her life, whereas in reality I think we just let people get on with their lives whatever their nationality and certainly don't get excited about it. The author hasn't quite remembered the reserve of the Brits and the way in which it plays out with visitors. However it was a good read and I liked the way it wasn't entirely predictable. I felt that the 'baddie' wasn't quite convincing and a fair amount of the events with regard to the witches coven weren't explained. The love story was reasonably well done and the reader was left feeling that hero and heroine would be happy together, but I didn't find myself gripped by this book as much as I can be by others. Kurzbeschreibung Tall, Dark And Immortal If there is one thing Dixie LePage does not need in her life, it's complications. And the man sitting across the table from her in a crowded English pub is a major complication. For starters, there's the broad shoulders. The slightly amused smirk. That smoldering look that makes it impossible to concentrate. No doubt about it, the guy is hot and sexy. Of course, there is one wee little problem: He claims to be a vampire named Christopher Marlowe, as in THE Christopher Marlowe, famous playwright, contemporary of Will Shakespeare. Amend that to hot, sexy, and totally insane. So why can't Dixie seem to resist the warmth of Christopher's charm, the protective feel of his strong hands, or the tempting pull of his full mouth when the sun goes down. . . ?
