1948 Von Kate Highbury Margaret Mayhew wieder mit einem sehr guten Buch. Es geht um Lili Leicht, eine Deutsche die im sowjetischen Sektor in Berlin in der Ruine ihres Hauses lebt. Sie muss nun für ihre Brüder und ihren kranken Großvater sorgen. Und es geht um Michael Harrison, einen Engländer und ehemaligen Bomberpiloten, der Berlin im Krieg bombardiert hat. Beide treffen in Berlin aufeinander und verlieben sich ineinander. Das hört sich vielleicht ein wenig banal an, aber Mrs. Mayhew schreibt wieder in ihrem Stil, den ich so mag. Sie schildert das nach dem Krieg zerstörte Berlin, wie die Menschen dort versuchen sich wieder aufzurappeln und zu überleben. Sie schreibt über den Schwarzmarkt und, sehr wichtig, über die Luftbrücke. Ein sehr berührendes Buch, und sehr einfühlsam geschrieben.

Kurzbeschreibung BERLIN 1948: - A vanquished city of rubble - sliced into sections by the Allies, and set well back behind the Russian lines. A city of old women, black marketeers and sleazy cabarets in ruined cellars. In the British sector was Squadron Leader Michael Harrison, a war hero who had helped to bomb Berlin into fragments. He hated the Nazis who had killed his sister and her children. But here he was, doing his best to ensure that food and fuel was somehow brought in to save the surviving Berliners. In the Russian sector was young Lili Leicht, German, middle-class daughter of a university professor and now living in the ruins of her former home, trying to prevent her grandfather and two younger brothers from dying of malnutrition. Her mother had been killed by British bombers. As the tensions in the smouldering city grew worse, so Michael and Lili slowly fell in love. It was a love that surmounted all the prejudices and hatreds of war and offered a hope of understanding for the future. Werbetext An heroic love story, set at the time of the Berlin Air Lift.
