Die bekannte Welt, mit Anleihen aus dem Altertum, wird von verschiedenen Gtterrassen, Vampiren, die im Alter zu Stein werden, und ihren Verbndeten beherrscht.Die Mittdreissigerin Arianne hat sich fr 10 Jahre als Blutmahlzeit fr den mchtigen Vampir Msrah verdungen, in der Hoffnung, so den Mrder ihres geliebten Bruders zu finden und gleichzeitig Geld zu verdienen, da sie jetzt für ihre minderjährigen Nichten und den Neffen verantwortlich ist. Was dummerweise schief geht, sie wird vom falschen Vampir, von Comfrey Makepeace, gebissen und gebunden. Die Suche gestaltet sich um einen verschwundenen, von ihrem Bruder konstruierten Roboter und den Kristall, der ihn belebt. Diese seltenen Kristalle, welche Energie liefern, gehen zur Neige, und Arianne versucht das Geheimnis darum herum zu lösen. Man wird mitten in die Geschichte hinein geworfen mit vielen und fremden Namen. Zum Glück gibt es ein Glossar, so dass man nicht ganz so hilflos ist. Die Welt ist recht kompliziert und es dauert einige Kapitel, bis man in der Story drin ist. Die diversen Charaktere werden gut aufgebaut und sind fesselnd, interagieren miteinander. Ein interessanter Serienanfang. 0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. beautifulVon LDThis is not my favourite of the author's books (which would be the Medair duology) but it is still a fascinating, rich and complex story. Ms. Hst is my favourite contemporary author, her writing is beautiful, her imagination fantastic and her love stories move outside of the ordinary standard lines. This story is set in a very complex world and one has to be somewhat patient until one has a decent grasp on all the basics of the world she has spun but it is well worth it.

KurzbeschreibungIn a world where lightning sustained the Roman Empire, and Egypt's vampiric god-kings spread their influence through medicine and good weather, tiny Prytenia's fortunes are rising with the ships that have made her undisputed ruler of the air. But the peace of recent decades is under threat. Rome's automaton-driven wealth is waning along with the New Republic's supply of power crystals, while Sweden uses fear of Rome to add to her Protectorates. And Prytenia is under attack from the wind itself. Relentless daily blasts destroy crops, buildings, and lives, and neither the weather vampires nor Prytenia's Trifold Goddess have been able to find a way to stop them. With events so grand scouring the horizon, the deaths of Eiliff and Aedric Tenning raise little interest. The official verdict is accident: two careless automaton makers, killed by their own construct. The Tenning children and Aedric's sister, Arianne, know this cannot be true. Nothing will stop their search for what really happened. Not even if, to follow the first clue, Aunt Arianne must sell herself to a vampire. ---First in a five book series.
