Von mountainmama This book has it all romance, murder, mystery, travel, interior decorating, and a healthy woman who eats chocolate! When James returns from a work trip, he discovers his flat-mate has been murdered. Although he has trouble accepting a break-up with his former girlfriend, he and his best friend, Fran, finally become lovers. The story follows their search for the truth in their lives, and how it affects and intertwines with all the other individuals. Great character development and descriptions you could easily identify with the people, places, and fabulous meals! Ms. Warburton did a wonderful job of creating an emotional plotline and weaving the personalities and events into a believable story. Well written and edited, she has a talent for plotting a tale and tying it all together into a satisfying ending.

ber den Autor und weitere Mitwirkende Trained in fashion design at Londons Ealing Art School, Jan first began working for the House of Worth in Mayfair, London in 1958. She then moved on to wholesale fashion as the designers assistant for Slimma. Marriage to an army officer in 1961 took her to Germany for three fascinating years. Later, back in civilian life they moved to Singapore; another amazing experience, she says, which has proved valuable grist to her writing mill. After moving to Yorkshire in 1972, she later went through a painful divorce and survived 6 years with two kiddies as a one parent family - a tough period, from which she has drawn in her fiction writing. After managing a fashion boutique in Wakefield, Yorkshire for 2 years, her last position for several years was sales rep for a top designer spectacle frame company, until redundancy finally allowed Jan to pursue her writing ambition. She has a daughter Jayne, son Justin, and two granddaughters Abby and Alexia. Now happily married to Mark for 35 years, they live in a converted barn in rural Yorkshire. In the past Jan has successfully sold various articles and short stories to UK magazines, but longer book length fiction has been her main interest for many years.
